

A change from one form of energy to another is called an energy transformation.

Law of conservation of energy says energy cannot be created or destroyed.

The theory of relativity stated that energy can sometimes be created by destroying matter.

